Virginia's Black Horse Troop. The celebrate ! B ack Horse cava'ry, which figured so conspicuously at the first battle of Bull Run on the Confederate side, had its origin about 1830. At that period, the Virginia youth, imbued with the military spirit of the timer, and in order to escape jury and other unpleasant civil duties, particularly the young men residing in the counties of the young men residing in the counties of Rappahanneck, Loudoun, Fauquier and Prince William had their own troops of cavalry. They were mustered every month at the county seat, and in addition paraded on every holiday of the year, Christmas, 4th of July, New Year's day, and February 22d. Besides, they attended all the fairs and barbacuts—in fact, turning out wikingly on the slightest excuse. They were uniformed in the old heavy dragoon style, glistening, metalic helmets, with long horse tails flowing from the top, and these corresponded to the troop. They were a short jacket with the troop. They were a short jicket with two wads behind for the saber-belt to rest upon. The saber itself was long and heavy and the sheath was of note! They always appeared in white treasers, both winter and summer—the material, of course, varying with the season. Their boots were high, cavairy pattern, and from them large spurs

jing'ed as they rode along
When first organized, they frequently met in competitive drift, both battation and company, and at that time the horses of the several troops were not distinguished by a certain color; then, to make a distinguishing mark by which the company con d be ing mark by which the company to the state told at a grace, the custom began of having each company? a horses of the same color, but each company of a different color; thus the Rappahanneck's were bays, Loudour's greys, Prince William's sorrers, and Fau-quier's blacks. The first officers of these quier's blacks. The first timeers of these troops were of the aristocratic families of Powells, Skinners, Randolphs, Berkeleys, Payner, Mercers, Marrs, Slaughters, Welfords, and Fauntieroys.

In 1834, when General Jackson was President of the United States, he went down from Washington to Fredericksbug to assist in laying the corner-tone of the monument then to be erected to the memory of Mary, the mother of Washington—'c-day a nethe mother of Washingtor.—'c-day a neglected ruin—and the Black Horse troup went to Aquia creek to act as the President's eacort on the occasion. The troop was commanded at the time by Capt. T. T. Fauntleroy and his quartermaster was Dangerfield Fauntleroy, a brother of a captain. Political party spirit ran very high at that time in Virginia, and the Black Horse from Fauquier county was the only one that would turn out to excort the President of the United States. The total President of the United States. The total strength of the company was mustered on that occasion, and they made a bandsome appearance on their jet black steeds. Besides, the two Fauntieroys were especia noted for their striking, appearance, as well as their social qualities. Thus they greatly endeared themselves to the old general and he highly appreciated the compliment they had paid him. They met him at Aquia creek, where the boat from Washington landed, and escorted him from that point to Fredericksburg, and on his return to Aquia creek, and altogether were with him a week. At the President's earnest solicitation they would have gone with him to the capital, if the boat had sufficient capacity to accommodate the men and horses. President Jackson was so well pleased with the two officers that, after his return to Washington, he appointed the captain a major of dragoons in the regular army and his brother a purser in the navy. T. T. Fauntleroy rose to the rank of colonel. He resigned when his State seceded in 1861, but was never given a command in the Confederate service. He dled at the tipe age of 83 in 1883 His brother, Daingerfield the purser, served with distinction until his death from yellow fever at Persacola navy yard in 1850. At the breaking out of the civil war the Black Horse troop was commanded by Capt. Wm H. Payne, who became a famous general of cavalry in the Confederate army, One day, just after the assassination of Pres ident Lincoin, as Gen. Payne was passing through Wa-hington as a prisoner of war, he was assaulted by a furious mob, who, learning that his name was Payne, thought he was the Payne of Florida who was mixed up in the murder, and but for the determined the results of the search of t mined bravery of the captain of the ercort of infantry, whose name I forget, Gen. Payne would have been killed. The gallaot captain, who risked his life to save that of Payne, now resides to Warrenton with the General, and is beloved by all for his conduct on the occasion referred to .- Rich Letter in Atlanta Constitution

Simmons Liver Regulator One Dose

Dear S. I. B.—Friends: I consider one dose of Simmons Liver Regulator worth $100. I was constipated, had headache, could eat nothing with satisfaction or appetite; had the blues and felt altogether out of sorts I reserved to blue mass, calomel, quinine and all remedies sugges ed, but only obtained temporary relief. One dose of S. L. R. did mo more good than the $100 worth of doctors and dectoring. Respectfully,

T. C. MARKLEY

I have been a teacher for twenty years, and during that time have had repeated attacks of headache produced by torpid liver, and I have been entirely cured by the use of Simmons Liver Regulator. I found it to be of so mild a character in its action as not to interfere, in the least, with my duties in the school room. To those similarly situated and subject to same, I cannot too highly recommend Simmons Liver Regulator. E.A. CHEEK.
